

STEVIE NICKS

AND OTHER WONDERS

Spring must be the season for Stevies on the Las Vegas Strip. First, the whirling dervish of rock herself, Stevie Nicks, takes over the fabulous Colosseum at Caesars Palace for a four-night limited engagement beginning May 10th. According to Nicks, "It's basically going to be favorite songs, which you don't always get to do. This is actually a chance for me to go back all those many, many years."

Fans can expect to hear some of the greatest rock anthems and ballads of the '70s and '80s from the fringed one's days with Fleetwood Mac, including "Rhiannon," "Landslide," "Dreams," "Sara," "Gypsy" and the epic "Beautiful Child." Likewise, her numerous hits as one of the great solo artists of the last two decades, including "Edge of Seventeen," "Rooms on Fire," "Talk to Me," "Bombay Sapphire" and the infectious "Stand Back," will likely be on the playlist.

Stevie Nicks is one of America's greatest living rock icons (even inspiring New York's annual Night of a Thousand Stevies party at the legendary Jackie 60 nightclub/cabaret), and is a phenomenon well worth experiencing live.

A week after Stevie Nicks wraps up at Caesars Palace, 22-time Grammy Award winner Stevie Wonder will take the stage at the Mandalay Events Center for a one-night-only benefit concert as the headliner of Tiger Jam VIII, Tiger Woods' eighth annual fundraiser sponsored by the SBC family of companies.

It wouldn't be extreme to call Wonder a bona fide musical genius, as his music has shaped rock, pop, soul, R&B and funk. Songs like "Superstition," "Another Star," "My Cherie Amour," "Sir Duke," "For Once in My Life" and "As" not only composed a good portion of the soundtrack to the '70s and '80s, but also continue to serve as vital inspiration to generations of musicians to this day. —Michael Shulman
